This resource provides best practices for communication between University of Michigan research project teams and central offices (like the Office of Research and Sponsored Projects (ORSP) or Finance-Sponsored Programs), whether through traditional means or via the eResearch proposal management system (eRPM).

Effective communication is at the heart of any thriving organization. Each day we ask questions, offer and seek updates, and strive for understanding and good outcomes.

In times of remote work, deadlines, increased work volume, physical barriers, or other stress-inducing challenges, we all can benefit from a refresher on established protocols and clear expectations for communications.

GENERAL TIPS

- Assume each of us has the best intentions.
- Be a good listener.
- Be mindful of body language, facial expressions, and tone in spoken and written messages.
- Set a communication reply goal. If you know you cannot respond within that goal, let the asker know that you will follow up, and estimate when.
- Draft questions in the active voice for clarity.
- Minimize redundant communications (e.g., sending an e-mail to indicate that something was posted in eRPM).
- Check locally. Often questions can be answered internally. Try new U-M Research Administration Forum on Workplace. Peer-to-peer support is indispensable!

People who communicate effectively create less friction and experience fewer misunderstandings, saving time.

EMAIL VS. PHONE COMMUNICATION MATRIX

WHEN TO EMAIL

When eRPM is not an option, you can draft an email. Do this when...

- ...documentation in eRPM is not necessary.
- ...documentation aids later support and clarification.
- ...clarification is needed before documenting in eRPM.
- ...you need to share correspondence with a sponsor.

& HOW

Always:

- Include all contact information in your signature, including your email and phone number.
- Include relevant U-M reference information, e.g.:
  - Award record (AWD) number;
  - Proposal Approval Form record (PAF) number;
  - Unfunded Agreement record (UFA) number;
  - Project/Grant (P/G) number (for Finance-Sponsored Programs);
  - Principal Investigator (PI) name;
  - Sponsor name and detailed contact information (if requesting that a central office contact them).
- Direct your email to the person you're requesting a response from, using the "To" line appropriately.
- Copy interested parties when necessary, using the "cc:" line and “Reply to All” appropriately.
- Proofread for accuracy, clarity, and tone.
- When forwarding, summarize the action requested in the introduction. Re-iterate the subject in the first line of an email, and include your question.
- Put as much key information in the subject line as possible, including “URGENT” and a "RESPOND BY" time if a same-day reply is needed.
- Time-sensitive messages should describe consequences of a delayed response.

WHEN TO PHONE

Picking up the phone (and leaving a voicemail) may help when...

- ...you need a quick confirmation or to speak with someone directly (remember to leave a voice mail).
- ...you are experiencing miscommunication (e.g., still not clear after writing back and forth).
- ...you need to discuss complex situations or when multiple issues need resolution.
- ...you're asked to respond by phone, or you need to speak in real time via phone or Zoom.
- ..for urgent matters or same-day requests (and, of course, it is best to plan ahead and avoid these situations wherever possible).

& HOW

Always:

- Leave a voicemail, which will be automatically transcribed and forwarded via email.
- Identify yourself and why you are calling.
- Concisely reference any relevant U-M reference information, e.g.:
  - AWD number;
  - PAF number;
  - UFA number;
  - P/G number (for Finance-Sponsored Programs);
  - PI name;
  - Sponsor name and detailed contact information (if requesting that a central office contact them).
- If you do connect, be sure to ask if it is a good time to speak with the person you've called and indicate how long you think you'll need to resolve the matter (e.g., “Do you have five minutes, or time for a quick call?”).
